

Hierarchy of Comfort.

How Comfortable do You Want to Be?

There is a Hierarchy of Comfort based on your ability and weapon selection.

For example, completing an Empty Hand Defense Course at Front Sight will give you the comfort of knowing you have the ability to break contact with an average size adversary attempting to injure or kill you with his bare hands.

Would you feel comfortable with your skills if your adversary were 6 feet 5 inches tall, weighed 280lbs and was in great physical condition? Would you feel comfortable if there were multiple adversaries? Would you feel comfortable if your spouse or children were also being attacked? Without a weapon and the skill to use it effectively under the stress of a lethal encounter, your answer is likely “no.”

Well, if we put a knife in your hand and teach you how to use it to defend yourself in Front Sight's Edged Weapons Course, you begin to feel a bit more comfortable in dealing with a large single adversary, or maybe even multiple, unarmed adversaries, but that is where your comfort ends if your attacker is armed with a gun!

So in all practical reality, your Comfort of Skill at Arms really starts with your ability to handle a defensive handgun! The good news is that after a Four Day Defensive Handgun Course at Front Sight you will have the mindset, gun handling, and marksmanship to handle multiple, armed adversaries at conversational distances. If needed, you will be able to present your handgun from a concealed holster and deliver your first shot to the center of your target 5 meters away within 1.5 seconds! Such skill gives you great comfort because you know you have the ability within seconds to defend yourself and loved ones.

A shotgun in your trained hands will provide you with even greater comfort—especially in low light conditions—and will generally extend your ability to control your environment against hostilities out to about 35 yards. The 12 gauge shotgun, when using buck shot has much greater stopping power than the handgun and the pattern assists (not as much as the average person thinks...) in making much faster hits on your target. After a Two Day Shotgun Course at Front Sight you will gain the certainty to operate a shotgun with authority!

A rifle, in calibers of .223 or greater in the hands of a practical rifleman is a tool that gives you the ability to control your environment out to distances that you can see with your naked eye. A practical rifleman is one who can score first round center hits, on targets appropriate to his weapon, at unknown distances, from improvised field positions, against the clock. After completing a Four Day Practical Rifle Course at Front Sight, you will be a practical rifleman!

A precision rifle with a high power optical sight gives you the comfort of knowing you command the terrain out to distances well beyond what the unassisted human eye can see. A Precision Rifle Course at Front Sight will make first round center hits at 600 yards so common as to bore you. Depending on the caliber and inherent consistency of your rifle and ammunition selection, you can control your environment from 1200 to 2400 yards away!

So the question really is, “How comfortable do you really want to be?”

Whatever your answer, Front Sight can provide you with the Comfort of Skill at Arms you desire. I am sure of it. In fact, Front Sight will more than satisfy your expectations or I will pay for your training. You have my personal guarantee.

Watch for Message # 2 from me in a couple of days where I will give you a Little Known and Rarely Talked About (outside of a Front Sight course) Secret Training Tip that will make your precision handgun shots much more accurate.
